

New Oat Genotyping Scientist at USDA-ARS, Fargo, ND, USA

Dr. Raja Nandety is the new Genotyping Scientist taking over the service component at the Fargo, ND, Cereal Unit. He says, “I will be heading the services unit dealing with the genotyping of wheat, oats, and barley. We are actively trying to expand our footprint into oat genotyping alongside that of wheat and barley.

I am a plant biologist with interests in genomics and informatics. I previously worked on legume genomics as part of NSF projects at the Noble Research Institute, Oklahoma, USA. I feel very excited to be part of the oat community and look forward to many meaningful collaborations and discussions.”

Welcome to the community, Raj!
